Medical & Health Tourism in Spain

Medical Tourism in Spain

Past years have seen Spain gain prominence for its excellent medical system that offers quality medical treatment for patients from all over the globe. With so much to offer it is no surprise that the WHO health care rankings place Spain at the leading position for best health care system in Europe. The same report says that the Spanish are among the most satisfied with their health care quality in Europe. Not surprising because Spain's economy has been on the stronger side of the scale and this has helped modern hospitals and well-trained health care professionals to spring up, giving Spain everything needed to be seen as an up-and- coming destination for medical tourism.

Spanish hospitals and doctores: There are more than 750 hospitals, 1.21 million beds and 450,000 doctors and nurses offering 2.4 million surgeries per year. The Spanish health Industry bears an excellent reputation of the essential post operative care after any kind of surgery. This has led to millions of tourists going to Spain for medical treatment.

Medical tourists can take some relief from the fact that the Spanish are among the world's healthiest people. The average life expectancy is the highest in the European Union: 80 for women and 74 for men. Major hospitals feature the latest high-tech equipment and the required staff to operate them. Most of Spain's clinics and hospitals feature a specialty wing offering special privileges for the medical tourist. Some of these include proving patients the choice to select the doctors to treat them.
